

David Viney

External Intervention Solicitor, The Law Society of New South Wales

David Viney is an External Intervention Solicitor with the Law Society of New South Wales charged with taking over management or providing assistance to firms when, for various reasons, the principal becomes unavailable. He has experience in many areas of the practice of law and in the operation of the businesses of legal practice. Whilst studying law David spent 10 years working for the Attorney Generals Department in Local Courts Administration, working in Local Courts all over the state. Upon graduating, David went into private practice, firstly in Sydney before practising as a solicitor in Port Macquarie for 20 years across several partnerships. Returning to Sydney in 2014, David worked for a number of firms and as a sole practitioner before joining the Law Society of New South Wales in October 2021.
